Graham Greene's novel The Heart of the Matter is set in an unwelcoming British colony in West Africa during World War II.

Show how the following aspects of setting are important to Greene’s portrayal of Scobie and his wife Louise, and their relationship:

- the climate and physical environment
- the social context, including both the British and the natives’ way of life
- the political background (war)